A detailed look at Poly's chief...

BY JAY ALLING

Daily Staff Writer

Newly appointed president of Cal Poly Dr. Warren J. Baker has some big shoes to fill, and he said Monday he is ready to put them on.

A Cal Poly president has to meet the standards of previous Cal Poly presidents, said Board of Trustees Chair Roy Brophy. That meant Baker, 40, who is currently the youngest president in the CNUC system, had to possess qualities of retired predecessor Bob Kennedy.

Kennedy guided the university through 11 years of planned growth. He molded it into one of the most popular universities in California—turning away more than 4,000 qualified applicants yearly. Kennedy's influence reached all parts of Cal Poly from dorm licenses to course curriculums.

Baker said he is prepared to fill expectations of students, administration and the community. He said his experience as dean of the University of Detroit School of Engineering and as a professional engineer have enabled him to deal with many types of problems, both administrative and technical.

Dark-haired and spectacled Baker said what drew him to Cal Poly was the "philosophy of education and the challenge." He said San Luis Obispo's small-town atmosphere was another deciding factor. Baker said although he plans no major reorganization, he will give his assistants a large role in administrative decisions.

"I prefer to delegate authority. Things that need to be done at Cal Poly will take a great deal of time from the president," explained Baker, who is an expert in geotechnical problems of soil composition.

Baker said he wants to make sure Cal Poly students graduate with a well-rounded education, because Cal Poly is a technical school. Baker said students may not be given enough emphasis in humanities.

"I'd like to know our students can make decisions on a broad perspective rather than a narrow outcome," said Baker, referring to students' knowledge in social sciences.

Baker said one of his main thrusts as president will be to find university funding other than from the state. Research grants and federal funding will be studied, he said.

"We want people, both private sources and government sources to cough-up some money," said Baker.

Baker, who will move to the president's house on campus this summer, said he looks forward to relocating.

...and campus reacts to selection

BY SCOTT CRAVEN

Daily Co-editor

The appointment of Warren Baker as Cal Poly's president was generally well-received Tuesday by campus and student officials.

Willie Huff, student representative of Academic Senate, talked last week with all candidates and said Baker was a good choice.

"I thought for sure there was no way they (the CNUC Board of Trustees) were going to pick him because he is so young," said Huff of the 40-year-old Baker. "But he came across well in the interviews."

Huff has reservations about the new president, however, saying that Baker will most likely maintain the status-quo of the administration having final say.

"He said he'd be open to students, but I don't know if he said that just to please us (students) or if he was really sincere," said Huff.

Huff said Baker told them a group of students last week his office would be open to students but that he also had to do his job and wouldn't be available at all times.

"It sounded like he would receive student input but would reserve the ultimate decision for himself," said Huff.

Huff said he was more impressed with the candidate from Florida, that candidate seeming to be much more open to student interests. Huff said the Florida candidate told students he would abide by many of their decisions, just as long as they were well-researched.

"The guy from Florida seemed really enthusiastic about the job," he said. "He sounded sincere about his openness to students. I would have to say, in my own opinion, that Baker was probably the student's second choice."

However, Huff said the faculty on the executive committee that talked with the candidates thought Baker was the best candidate.

"They were really excited about him," said Huff.

Huff said that because Baker is so young, he might be here a long time. "Baker can look at a lot of long range policies," said Huff. "He can go for slow implementation of his policies and can afford to be cautious."

Vice President for Academic Affairs Hazel Jones said she was pleased with the selection of Baker.

"His academic and industrial credentials are impressive and that's the kind of mix Cal Poly is looking for," she said. "He made a tremendous impression when he visited here last week."

Jones said the first thing Baker will have to do is orient himself with the campus and acquaint himself with its problems.

A major problem Baker will face, he said, is lack of funds. "He has to make the money go as far as possible," said Jones. "He can't let a lack of resources damage the programs."

Jones said the administration is pleased with Baker's selection saying, "The Board of Trustees made an excellent decision."

Poll problems

Larry Robinson's contestment of last week's run-off election between Rose Kranz and Ann Glendenen has brought up serious questions about the way ASI elections are run.

Letters received by Robinson from students expressed concern over questionable behavior by election workers. ASI Vice President Phil Dunn and Election Chair Carla Curtis said letters of this kind are submitted after every election. This is an indication something is seriously wrong with the present election procedure.

The only students who cannot work at the polling tables are the candidates. There is no rule preventing campaign managers or workers from handing out ballots.

During the presidential run-off election, one candidate's campaign manager, along with a strong supporter of that candidate, worked at the same table. Whether or not they did anything illegal is unknown but the opportunity to sway people was definitely there. This is ridiculous and highly improper.

No one who holds an ASI office, unless they are on the election committee, should be allowed to work at the polls. It is difficult enough for anyone to remain impartial but to expect someone who is in the thick of the ASI to be unrealistic.

During the original election earlier this month, several polling places closed early because of a lack of workers. This either means there is not enough interest to conduct an election or poor planning on the part of the election committee.

Each club on campus should be required to provide two workers for the election. Since ASI supports the clubs through monetary allocations it has the right to require this.

Another alternative would be to instill the help of the Political Action Club or the Pre Law Club to work at the polls. But whatever action is taken, the present method must stop.

Until there are strict rules made about who can and cannot work at the poll, ASI will continue to receive letters of protest after elections. ASI cries for respect from the students it governs but until these sophomore procedures are revamped the body will have one more obstacle in its way.

Curbing Mike II

Mike Curb is at it again.

In a grandstand move that is becoming all too typical of Curb, the lieutenant governor issued an executive order telling oil companies to boost the lead level in gasoline, thereby increasing gas production. Curb, not one to miss opportunities, took advantage of Gov. Brown's trip to Washington and assumed gubernatorial powers. Brown, was in the nation's capitol trying to convince Carter that California needed more gas.

Brown's press secretary said the governor is not going to rescind the order. "He is not going to dignify the order by a rescission," said the press secretary.

Instead of playing Curb's game, Brown is going to battle the matter out in court. Previously, Curb had appointed several judges while Brown was out of state. These appointments were rescinded, but it didn't stop Curb from abusing his temporary power the next time Brown crossed state lines.

It was obvious what Curb was going to do when he was elected. He is turning the lieutenant governor's office into a monkey, a political tournament. It is obvious that the record executive is using the office as a key to the governor's mansion.

We had predicted Curb would be taking advantage of his post when he was elected back in November. Our exact words were, "Curb may take every chance he can to get his shots in at the democrats when the chief steps out." This has now been proven.

Curb shoved his way into office, using the money and influence he accumulated in the record business. Money not only talks, it makes politicians, and it certainly made Mike Curb.

No simple answers

The other day, two Campus Christian Crusaders came up to me in the University Union. They asked me a few questions about my religious upbringing. I was happy to answer them.

Next, they asked me if I would like to get closer to Christ. I knew I was in for a lecture, but I had to be honest with them. Of course I would like to be closer to Christ.

I didn't think they would take me literally. I didn't think they meant "physical proximity" when they said "closer." But they pulled out a little booklet and began to explain how to get closer to Christ. Carefully, they spoon-fed me a do-it-yourself formula for getting closer to Christ.

As I sat watching and listening to them read my formula for salvation "Miss Nancy" style (pointing to diagrams of circles and triangles), I grew more and more angry.

They were sitting there trying to reduce something abstract, nebulous and beautiful into a simple formula to be achieved in four easy steps.

I was incensed and amazed that someone could take such a simplistic view of such a complex entity.

I was angry because these crusaders were attempting to apply logic to Christ. Logic belongs in this concrete, present world. It belongs to science and mathematics, areas that can be manipulated or destroyed.

But God cannot be manipulated or destroyed. He and Christ are not scientific entities.

Author MaryAnn Gilpatrick is a junior journalism major and Mustang Daily staff writer.

Crusaders, you attempt to reduce Christ to reason. Yet God, in my mind, will always be mysterious and complex. If He was simple, the awe imbedded in faith would fade and disappear.

I definitely would rather hear the well-worn but appropriately abstract statements, "God is beautiful," "God is Love," and "God is all-forgiving" than be tutored in specific, restrictive lessons on how to dial "hotline to Christ."

Letters

All in fun

Editors:

I was not only a participant in the Kool-Aid chug in the UU last Thursday; my roommate and I were the winning team.

I read the "Letter" section of the Mustang Daily Tuesday and discovered that someone was calling the contest "inexorable."

Dennis Lee also insulted everyone in the contest by calling us "asinine" and "idiotic." Mr. Lee even has the gall to ask for an explanation. Well, Mr. Lee, I feel you're the one who should not only come up with an explanation, but also an apology.

If you want an explanation for why I did it, I'll tell you. It was all pure fun. It's like eating live goldfish or cramming people into phone booths.

I don't believe the people who put on the contest really expected people to get sick, but so what if "we" got sick — it's no business of yours.

Parking answers

Editors:

With all the rhetoric about the "parking problem," it seems ironic that there is little or no mention of a partial solution to this problem.

Motorcycles, which are both energy and space efficient, are required to park further from the academic core than most cars. This seems odd since the space required for motorcycle lots is available in close proximity to the core area. There are "void" areas in virtually every parking lot, and several of the blocked-off streets would provide excellent sites for additional motorcycle parking at minimal cost.

It would be only logical to promote, instead of penalize, the use of energy and space efficient modes of transportation. I trust that the Administration will consider and rectify this situation as soon as possible.

Summer is few students but lots of apartments

BY LAURA CHRISTMAN

Daily Associate Editor

Summer comes, students leave, and apartments go empty. It's the same old story for Walt Lambert, off-campus housing coordinator, who said he is flooded by "summer only" apartment listings each year at about this time.

"People are forced into 12 month leases and most of them are planning to go home for the summer," Lambert said. "Some may have an apartment sitting empty are are paying $200 or $300 a month for it to sit there."

Lambert said there is no real way to solve the problem, aside from year-round school, because landlords don't want to be left with empty apartments for the summer months while students are on vacation. He said the students can try to sublet their apartment but that this is sometimes difficult because there are only about 5000 students who remain in San Luis Obispo over the summer.

"There's not much of a market," Lambert said.

Students who are trying to sublet their house or apartment should be willing to negotiate, he said.

"They should be willing to accept a loss just to get something," he said. "The cheaper they can rent for, the better their chances are."

Lambert added that students who do stay over the summer can usually find some good bargains in living accommodations.

For students who are unable to find other students to sublet their apartment, Lambert said the Off-Campus Housing Office is working on a listing of available housing for the summer that can be given to the Chamber of Commerce.

"There may be people coming up here for just a month's vacation who need a place to stay," Lambert said. "They could get an apartment for a month cheaper than they could get other accommodations."

He said just getting paid something for one month would be better than taking a full loss for the summer.

The Off-Campus Housing Office is also making an attempt to let Poly's faculty and staff know about apartment and housing vacancies so that people who have any friends or relatives coming up during the summer can find good living places at good prices.

The summer housing hassles are the result of the housing crunch in the fall. Students often feel compelled to sign a full-year lease in June so they can be guaranteed of a place to live in the fall, Lambert said.

"You can sign a lease now and know, or you can wait and see if it's still available," he said.

Students who come back to house hunt toward the end of summer still have a "pretty good chance" of finding a place to live, Lambert said. He said his office receives listings right through the summer and there is a fairly good chance of getting housing then.

"Empty houses and apartments are at a premium," Lambert said. "Most of our listings are for people looking for roommates to share expenses."

The same situation could have an effect on student living in places like Morro Bay, Los Osos and Pismo Beach, Lambert said.

"In the last four years we've seen no significant decrease or increase of people living in the North and South Counties but the same situation could create a decrease."

That would mean less problem in finding housing in those areas but more of a problem in finding housing in San Luis Obispo.

Some students begin looking for fall housing in February, Lambert said, but he thinks they may be panicking a little too early.

"Their worries may be a little premature," he said. "It isn't until the latter part of April and May until the landlords get notices from tenants who are moving out."

A lot of student end up on waiting lists, but Lambert said "waiting lists aren't worth the paper they're written on."

He said landlords are much more likely to take the person at the door with check in hand than to go through a long waiting list.

When students do find a place they are interested they should read, understand and ask any questions they can think of about the lease, Lambert said.

"Whatever you do, get it in writing," Lambert said. "Verbal contracts are legal but it's just your word against the landlord's."

Robinson explains election contestation

ASI President Larry Robinson explained Tuesday the reason he is contesting the presidential run-off election between Ross Kraus and Ann Clendenen.

Robinson gave a notice of "contestation," Friday to ASI Executive Chair Carla Curtis.

The president, who is in Long Beach attending a Board of Trustees meeting, said in a phone interview part of his reason for filing the protest was two letters he received from students alleging improper behavior at the polls.

"There were also a lot of people coming up to me and telling me there was pressure put on them to vote for Ross," said Robinson. "There has been a lot of talk and a lot of rumor and I feel it should be investigated."

"The students need to know it was a fair election," he continued.

Robinson said that since the deadline to contest an election is 24 hours after the polls close, he felt he had to turn in a notice.

Both ASI Vice-president Phil Dunn and Curtis said they felt the letters were inconsequential and would have no effect on the outcome of the election.

According to Robinson, the letters are "pretty serious."

"It's nothing I have against Ross," said Robinson. "The question is not whether I am for or against either of them but that I'm in favor of due process."

None of the people working at the polls, explained Robinson, "were extremely biased and would not have been afraid to voice their opinions. Many of the workers at the polls came from WOW of which Kraus is a member."

Campaign workers for both Kraus and Clendenen worked at the polls.

"I believe Ross tried to run a good campaign but some of her workers were overzealous," Robinson added.

State may get gas increase

SACRAMENTO (AP)—President Carter's special liaison to California predicted Tuesday a 10 percent increase in California gasoline supplies in June and a possible end to lines at service stations.

Federal energy liaison Charles Warren also told a news conference that California should again consider diamond lanes to encourage car pools.

Meanwhile, Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. said the expected extra gas is due in part to his "cage rattling" at the White House, and the Democratic governor renewed his attack on federal Energy Secretary James Schlesinger.

In another gasoline development, state Energy Commission Chairman Richard Maullin said "a trickle" of California gasoline may have gone to Arizona or Nevada, but that a newspaper account that 27 million gallons were lost to other states was "false."

Warren said California service stations got 81 percent of their 1978 allocations in May, but that the figure for June will be 90 percent.

Elton John rocks Soviets

LENINGRAD U.S.S.R. (AP)—British rock star Elton John's first concert in the Soviet Union erupted into a frenzy, with nearly 4,000 Russian fans dancing on their seats or in the aisles.

Uniformed Leningrad police and other Soviet officials were helpless to control the screaming, clapping mobs Monday night.

"I was determined to make it successful," the 32-year-old singer told reporters after the concert. "That's the biggest achievement I've ever received as an artist."

After the 2.5-hour performance, which John ended with a spur-of-the-moment of the Beatles hit tune, "Back in the U.S.S.R.," young people at first refused to leave the Oktjabrsky Concert Hall. "El-ton, El-ton," cried the teenagers who surged below the stage.

Outside the hall, at least 2,000 youths spilled over wooden barriers and a human chain of police just to catch one more glimpse of John, who stood in his dressing room window and waved to the crowd.

An official with the Soviet concert agency, Goskontsert, which had arranged the British star's appearance after months of negotiations, said: "I've never seen anything like this. Never."

No Western rock star as well known as John has ever been allowed to tour the Soviet Union. Monday night's performance was the first of four concerts he will give in Leningrad, followed by four more shows at Moscow's Rossiya Hotel.

The British rocker noted that after 10 years of performing to huge audiences all over the West, "I needed a challenge so we said, 'Let's try Russia.'"

Before John even walked on stage, scores of young people were gathered outside the hall trying to beg a ticket from foreigners and passers-by. Tickets were said to be selling on the black market for 100 rubles—$150—each.

John greeted his audience by saying "Dobry vecher." Good evening and gave a short bow as fans admired his purple satin tunic-and-pants outfit worn with a black, gold-spangled scarf.

Newsline

Brand new angel for Charlie

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Shelley Hack, the Charlie girl on the television commercials, is the new angel on ABC's "Charlie's Angels," producer Aaron Spelling said Tuesday.

The producer said he was at ABC for conferences in connection with signing Miss Hack for the role.

Spelling said Miss Hack would begin work on the series' opening two-hour show on a cruise ship in the Caribbean on June 11. The "Love Boat" cast will also appear on the show.

Miss Hack will replace Kate Jackson, who quit the show after three years as angel Sabrina Duncan. Her character name has not yet been chosen.

She is a top model and appears on the Charlie perfume commercials.

She will join Jaclyn Smith and Cheryl Ladd as the show opens its fourth season on ABC in September.

Miss Ladd replaced Farrah Fawcett-Majors when she left the show at the end of the series' first year.

Much speculation had surrounded selection of the new angel after Miss Jackson announced she was leaving the show. It was twice reported that actress Barbara Bach had been signed for the role.

Spelling said he and co-executive producer Leonard Goldberg had seen more than 200 actresses in their selection. In addition, they looked at photographs submitted by 5,000 other hopefuls.

Beatles come together again

LONDON (AP)—Ex-Beatle John Lennon was the only one of the famous four to miss a weekend reunion celebrating the marriage of rock guitarist Eric Clapton to George Harrison's former wife, Patti Boyd, the London Daily Express reported Monday.

The reunion of Harrison, Paul McCartney and Ringo Starr took place at Clapton's mansion home at Ewhurst, Surrey, about 20 miles from London, the paper said.

The gathering may have been the closest the Beatles have come to a full musical reunion since they broke up in 1969. Lennon, who lives in New York was the only one absent.

The three ex-Beatles, joined by Clapton, performed on a makeshift outdoor stage before 200 invited guests. They sang 1960s Beatles hits such as "Egt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band."

The gathering celebrated the recent wedding in Tucson, Ariz., of Clapton and Harrison's first wife, Patti, who was divorced from the ex-Beatle in 1977 after 11 years of marriage.

Rioters protest White verdict

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—A rioting mob, incensed at what they felt was a lenient verdict in the trial of Dan White, stormed City Hall with rocks and iron bars set police cars ablaze, torched two garages and turned the area into a battleground.

More than 5,000 demonstrators—many of them gay—taunted helmeted police outside the elegant domed building Monday night. They smashed almost all the first-floor windows, ripped iron grillwork loose, tore up and burned shrubbery in Civic Center Plaza and left a scene of devastation.

A short distance away, a row of 12 police cars was set ablaze. Their exploding fuel tanks could be heard above the yells and sirens.

Supervisor Carol Ruth Silver was struck in the face by a thrown rock. Her face was bloodied, but she did not appear to be seriously injured. The Board of Supervisors had been meeting inside when the mob struck.

At 1:15 a.m., after the mob had been dispersed, Mayor Dianne Feinstein pledged a "major police presence in the city" today to control further rioting. Damage was estimated at $20,000.

"I can't express in terms of disappointment or anger what happened tonight," she told reporters inside the ravaged City Hall. "I know feelings are running high in the city and I understand and I share them, but there is no excuse for this kind of violence."

White, 32, was found guilty of voluntary manslaughter Monday by a jury of seven men and five women who deliberated almost 36 hours over six days. The prosecution had asked for a first degree murder conviction, and it was the jury's refusal to return that verdict that apparently set off the violence.

The mob began forming about 7:30 p.m. and marched to City Hall from the mostly gay area of Castro Street as the sun began to set. At first they signaled their anger by blowing whistles and chanting, but the demonstration quickly turned ugly, and windows in the front door were smashed.

Dozens of riot-equipped police counterattacked shortly after 10 p.m., swinging clubs and driving the mob from the front of the besieged building. But it was more than two hours later, after a second, stronger push by police, that the demonstration began to dissolve.

Following the major disturbances in the downtown civic center area, there were also reports of scattered violence along Castro Street, police said.

The number of injured and arrested was difficult to determine, although less than a dozen arrests were initially reported. At St. Francis Hospital, about 12 blocks from the scene, nine people had been treated by midnight and more were coming in, according to nursing supervisor Donna Krause. Most of the injured suffered cuts and lacerations from rocks or blows from clubs. More were treated at smaller emergency rooms around the city.

California gas lines shortened

The lines of cars waiting for gasoline seem to be greatly reduced throughout California, although there was no official explanation for the decrease beyond the promise of more available gas for the upcoming holiday weekend.

"At this point the weekend through Memorial Day may have the best gasoline supply for the entire month of May," George Saunders, president of the Santa Clara County Service Station Dealers Association, said Monday.

There were no promises from anyone that the apparently shorter gasoline lines signified an end to the gas crisis.

"No one is saying its over," Saunders said. "No one is saying its going to be like it used to be, but the extreme difficulty we experienced in May hopefully is behind us."

he manager of a Shell station in San Francisco's Marina District, noted the once-long lines at his station did a gradual disappearing act.

"We were bombarded for a little Monday morning," said manager Jack Thomas, "then the lines were spotty and by the afternoon there was no line at all."

There were 2 and 3-car lines reported in Orange County, and drivers were pulling right up to the pump with no wait at all in San Diego, it was reported.

But for several San Fernando Valley stations, day No. 13 of the odd-even plan was definitely unlucky as station owners arrived at work to find pump hoses slashed by vandals.

Los Angeles Police Sgt. Will Dorn at the North Hollywood Division said six stations were attacked by vandals in the Studio City-North Hollywood area.

Louis Di'Muscolo discovered the severed hoses when he went to work at his Mobil station.

"Listen," he said, "if I'd seen 'em cut the hoses the newspaper would have had a big headline 'Somebody killed at Louis' Gas Station.'"

In other related developments Monday:

Governor Edmund G. Brown Jr. returned to his criticism of the Carter Administration, saying the president should "straighten out" Energy Secretary James Schlesinger.

"President Carter gave us great encouragement about the gas problem and then we hear Schlesinger say it was all a mistake," Brown said in Los Angeles.

The Lundberg Letter, a gas and oil price newsletter based in North Hollywood, reported that there's no grade of gasoline available at the average independent station for less than 90 cents a gallon.

Feds looking hard at Three Mile Island accident

WASHINGTON (AP)—The federal government, wanting to use the lessons it learned from near-catastrophe at the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant, will not issue new licenses for nuclear plants for at least three months.

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission agreed Monday to the waiting period proposed by Harold Denton, director of its Office of Nuclear Reactor Regulation.

Only a few nuclear power plants are expected to be affected by the three-month hiatus, said Roger Boyd, director of the NRC's Division of Project Management.

At the same time, General Counsel Leonard Bickwit was asked to look into the NRC's legal authority to adopt a formal moratorium on nuclear plant licensing.

The commission's action came as the city of Lancaster, Pa., went to court to try to halt a planned discharge of radioactive wastewater from the disabled Three Mile Island plant.

The city asked a federal district court to stop the discharge until the federal government prepares an environmental impact statement showing the plan is safe, the city contends its drinking water could become contaminated by the discharge.

Denton, in his proposal, called for temporarily reassigning about 15 NRC staff members to form a "Lessons Learned" task force. That group would review at least a dozen issues raised by the March 28 accident at the central Pennsylvania plant.

Among the issues are operator training and licensing; accident analysis; equipment, instrument and control requirements; emergency preparedness, and the NRC's role in responding to an accident.

Denton said it would take about a month to determine how the accident's lessons could be applied to other nuclear plants seeking licenses and to order necessary changes.

Then, it could take plant owners another month to comply, he said. An NRC review could take still another month.

Boyd said three units in Davis County, N.C., could be ready for operating license consideration "no sooner than June" and two units at Inola, Okla., no sooner than July.

Construction licenses could come up for consideration almost immediately for a reactor unit at Salem, N.J.; in June for units at Mineral, Va., and Avila Beach, Calif., and in July for one at Daisy, Tenn.

The lawsuit filed by Lancaster noted that 105,000 people drink from its water system. Some of the water comes from the Susquehanna River only five miles downstream from the stricken plant's discharge pipes.

The suit was filed against the NRC whose spokesman, Frank L. Ingram, said he could not confirm that the commission approved the discharge plan. "Any plan approved would be made public," he said.

But the suit charged that the NRC approved, without public notice, the plan to decontaminate 250,000 gallons of wastewater now in the plant's auxiliary building.

Deadline for summer school extended

Parents still interested in enrolling their children in the Cal Poly Summer Demonstration School have until Wednesday, May 30, to do so, said program director Dr. Joyce P. Webb.

The deadline for enrollment, which originally was May 15, has been extended, she said.

The Summer Demonstration School will begin on Monday, June 18, and continue through Friday, July 13, under sponsorship of Cal Poly's Education Department, Special Programs Office, and Extended Education Office.

Webb, coordinator of teacher education at the university, said children in kindergarten through eighth grade will participate in enriching activities in the creative arts, including drama, dance, and literature; economics; geography; Spanish; career education; and language and communication arts.

Teachers, education students and other adults interested in new techniques for handling social studies subject matter, will be able to observe and participate in an unusual instructional-learning experience under the guidance of university and other master teachers.

Classes of not more than 15 children per teacher will meet from 9 a.m. to noon, Monday through Friday, in room located in the university's Mathematics and Home Economics Building.

Cost of the Summer Demonstration School will be $125 each for children and $5 per unit for eight units of degree credit for adult participant-observers. Families wishing to enroll more than one child are invited to ask about a discount. Applications from either children or adults must be in by May 30.

Enrollment and other information about the new Cal Poly program can be obtained by calling Webb, 546-2592 or 546-2593.

Warren Baker

"It's certainly going to be different than Detroit," Baker added.

The new president emphasized that he will be a common sight on campus and will try to intermittently step out of his office in Administration 407 to acquaint himself with students.

"I like to talk to students both formally and informally," said Baker. "I like to catch students off-guard and ask them how things are going."

Baker warned students "don't be surprised" if he joins them in frisbee throwing on campus.

Baker's wife, Carly, also said she will be a visible part of campus life.

"I'm going jogging and I don't want anybody watching while I jog. I don't think I'll try the 12-mile loop right off the bat," Mrs. Baker joked.

Mrs. Baker commented on her husband's youthful appearance.

"He had to color his hair in a few places to make him look older," quipped Mrs. Baker.

Edge Of The Art ONKYO

Remaining a jump ahead of State-Of-The-Art is an ONKYO promise. That not only means the equipment itself, but in the engineering of a total audio system, one which is designed to perform according to your needs and refinements in program material, listening habits and involvement in the system itself.

Every since ONKYO introduced their first products in 1948, they have been committed to the world of sound. In the last decade, in particular, new technology has dominated the audio field, and ONKYO has pioneered a number of these innovations. Most recently, "quartz locked" tuning, "servo locked" tuning and automatic "human touch sensor" head ONKYO's list of achievements.

Naturally, none of this would have been without a very strong research and development program. It is their tireless and painstaking search for new ideas that makes ONKYO so unique.

As a result of this, we at Audio Ecstasy believe that some of the finest sounds in audio today come from ONKYO audio products. Because ONKYO is made for today... and tomorrow.

NBA basketball*Malone named MVP

NEW YORK (AP) — Moses Malone of the Houston Rockets, the National Basketball Association's leading rebounder, was named today the league's most valuable player for the 1978-79 season.

Malone received 112 votes in balloting by 223 NBA players completed at the end of the regular season, the NBA announced.

Nashville's George Gervin, the league scoring champion for the second straight season, finished second with 39 votes, followed by Elvin Hayes of Washington, 28, and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar of Los Angeles, 15.

The 24-year-old Malone, who passed up college to sign with the pros directly out of high school, averaged 17.6

rebounds per game to 12.8 for runner-up Rich Kelley of New Orleans. His 587 offensive rebounds broke his own NBA record and he grabbed 10 rebounds or more in 78 of the 82 regular-season games.

Malone, 6 feet 10 and 219 pounds, also ranked fifth in the league in scoring with a 24.8 average. He credits his success to hard work.

Jogging, dodging in SLO

BY GREGOR ROBIN
Daily Sports Writer

It could be jealousy, sadistic tendencies or just sick fun, but many drivers enjoy searing the hell out of joggers who run on the streets of San Luis Obispo. These drivers use three different types of scare tactics. The first one is the, "I won't look at him" tactic. This driver isn't out to scare you, but when he looks away he also takes his eyes off the road and seems to forget he is driving a car. His hands go limp on the wheel and the car drifts toward you.

"I won't look at him, therefore he doesn't exist," is probably what this driver is thinking.

The second is the, "I'm not jogging so he has no right to jog" tactic. This is where jealousy comes in. Usually high school age drivers maneuver this way. While a jogger runs on Orcutt Road, where the city has been working to put sidewalks in for the last year, he sees this guy coming at him in his Datsun pick-up with the do-it-yourself sun-roof.

He thinks, "Oh boy, here it comes." He tries to hold his ground on the slender shoulder of the road while this driver inches over into the jogger's path. One thing is for certain: if this driver doesn't succeed in anything else the rest of his life, he can still tell all his friends that he was a success at being a "jogger hater."

The third and most frightening type of driver is the, "I'm a red-neck and I hate everything I see" type. This guy does a quick swerve into the jogger's path and honks his horn simultaneously. He is a guy who loves to hate. He drives a pick-up truck filled with lumber and tools that says, "Harvey's Construction" on the door.

There is a glare in his eye, but he is smiling. His face is sun-burned and he probably has a can of Coors between his legs, but the jogger doesn't flip him off because he is aware that his life is meaningless to the red-neck. When this nut gets home and his dog is asleep in the driveway, he'll probably run him over.

This is just an example of the hassles joggers face on the streets. Many will say, "Stick to Poly Canyon. It is away from traffic," but Poly Canyon doesn't supply excitement like the streets of San Luis Obispo.

Spring football runs out

Coach Joe Harper listed the emergence of Reid Lundstrom as a quarterback and Paul Dickens as a fullback "the two most positive things that have come out of our spring football practice this year."

"Lundstrom has emerged from a position of obscurity having seen very limited action the past two years to a position as a starter. He has run the team all spring and is developing excellent confidence as well as the physical ability to execute the offense. His style is different than that of Craig Johnston," Harper reported.

"Reid is more of a scrambler and runner where Craig's long suit was his passing ability," Harper said. "Lundstrom is a very adequate passer. He reminds me of Mike Coulson's situation in

Poly favored at track national meet

The time has come for track coach Steve Miller to lead his Mustang team to battle and prove that Cal Poly has the best NCAA Division II track and field team.

The Mustangs are favored to capture the championship beginning Thursday at Western Illinois University in Macomb, Illinois. It's the second straight year that the Mustangs have been tabbed as the favorite going into the national championships. Coach Miller does not dispute the favorite's tag that has been applied to his third Cal Poly track and field edition.

"Cal Poly has to be the overwhelming favorite," Miller insists, "because we can score a lot of points without having a great national meet. There are other schools who can score quite a few points but they will have to have an almost flawless meet."

Cal Poly has the national leader in the pole vault (Tim McDonald at 17-6), 400-meter relay (19.9), 1,500 meters (Jim Schankel, who is not entered in the event despite a 3:41.64), 5,000 meters (Schankel in 13:48.13), 10,000 meters (Schankel in 28:53.74) and 400-meter intermediate hurdles (Bart Williams in 49.4).

Prairie View A&M, Cal State Northridge, Eastern Illinois, Mississippi College and Northern Iowa can be dangerous, Miller acknowledged.

"Another thing I like about our team going into the nationals is that almost all of the Cal Poly people who figure to score in the meet have been there before. The fact that we didn't win the title last year (Cal Poly finished second to Cal State Los Angeles) means that we are going into the nationals excited about winning a championship," Miller commented.

A quartet of super athletes heads the 22-man Cal Poly national championship entry. They are:

Lompoc junior Jim Schankel, the defending champion in both the 5,000 and 10,000 meters and the NCAA record holder in the 5,000. He ran 14:12.6 in 1978.

Senior Dan Aldridge from Petaluma, the defending champion and NCAA record holder in the 1,500 meters with a 3:45.4 effort.

Senior Bart Williams from Vallejo in the 400-meter intermediate hurdles where he is a three-time All-American with finishes of second, third and fifth.

Junior Tim McDonald from St. Helena in the pole vault with a leading mark of 17 feet, six inches.

Schankel, the NCAA Division II 1978 cross country champ, already has run under both the 5,000 and 10,000-meter NCAA records.

Although his teammate Schankel has the leading time in the nation in the 1,500, Aldridge also is among the top Division II athletes in the nation in the event with a mark of 3:43.8 has run nearly two full seconds under his own existing NCAA mark.

Williams has a brilliant 49.4 intermediate hurdle time.

"Bart is the class of the field in Division II," Miller said.

The Mustang mentor noted that his squad "could score 50 points in the pole vault, 5,000, 10,000, 1,500 and intermediate hurdles."

Competition begins Thursday with qualifying and preliminaries. The first final will be on Friday with the final 14 events on Saturday.

NHL champions celebrate

MONTREAL (AP)—They are called "Les Glorieux," the glorious ones, by the French-speaking fans who adore them. They are "The Habs," the inhabitants of Montreal, to the English-speaking.

To any and all, they are the National Hockey League's champions yet again. A fourth consecutive summer of celebration awaits the Montreal Canadiens, who have earned every restful day of it.

"I think the next toughest thing to winning the Stanley Cup is celebrating," said Montreal left wing Steve Shutt, who had three years of practice before Monday night's 4-1 triumph over the New York Rangers assured another. "I'm going to go crazy for three or four days, just like everyone else," he said.

Everyone else, it seemed, had a head start. One frisky Canadian splattered champagne on Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau and got away with it. Car horns blared in the streets after the glorious ones had won the title for the eighth time in 12 years but only the first on their home ice since 1960.

"I just feel incredibly relaxed," said goalie Ken Dryden, who faced only 13 shots in winning the fifth championship of seven active seasons with the club. "I'm interested in going home and drinking in the aftermath of what has happened."

What happened: Jacques Lemaire scored twice—including the second Cup-winning goal of his career—and Rejean Houle added three assists to pace the Montreal triumph. Bob Gainey, named the playoffs' Most Valuable Player, and Rick Chartraw had the other goals as the Canadiens extended their record playoff series winning streak to 12.

Carol Vadnais scored for New York, which powered into this best-of-seven series seeking its first title since 1940 and left this series seeking the same thing. For the Rangers, the final ended the same as the last one in 1973—in defeat.

"But our team, and the organization, we should be proud of ourselves," said right wing Anders Heberg, who with Swedish countryman Ulf Nilsson and Coach Fred Shero were major factors as New York went from the league's 12th-best record last year to the Stanley cup finals this season.

"We lost tonight, against a better team, but we have accomplished something in New York this year. We can have this summer in peace."

Walton recuperating

SAN DIEGO (AP)—Bill Walton was listed in good condition at a Los Angeles hospital after ankle surgery Monday to remove bone spurs.

The San Diego Clippers' center has had trouble with bone spurs in recent years, but it was not immediately known whether the spurs removed at Daniel Freeman Memorial Hospital were new growths.

Surgery was performed by Dr. Tony Daley, head physician for the 1980 U.S. Olympic teams.

The surgery may be a factor as the Clippers' try this week to arrange compensation with Portland, sources said.

Spring football practice ends

1973. He moved from a junior varsity quarterback to become the starter and we had one of our best offensive years we've ever had while winning nine of our 10 games."

Harper noted that the shift of Dickens, a senior from Seaside, from the role of a No. 2 tailback to the No. 1 fullback berth "has really given our offense a new dimension with his outstanding running ability from the fullback position plus a very solid blocking job. We have worked on blocking with our tailbacks, too."

"Louis Jackson will be used as a receiver as well as a blocker in 1979 and this makes for a more diverse offense," Harper informed as he wound down the spring preparations for his 12th campaign at the Mustang football helm.

Tom Gilmartin, a sophomore-to-be, and redshirt freshman Jerry Schmidt to the No. 1 fullback have been the "top two new people playing the defensive front," Harper said. Gilmartin from La Mirada is a converted offensive lineman. There are three starting spots open on defensive front due to graduation.

The heartbreak of hay fever: Trouble is in the air

BY GREG CORNING
Daily Staff Writer

It's hay fever time again. Of course, those who are afflicted with hay fever's sniffles, congestion and sneezing hardly need to be told that. Neither do the staff members of the Health Center at Cal Poly.

"We're seeing maybe 150 people a day with hay fever and probably more than that some days," said Dr. James Nash, Health Center director. In fact, the center has had so much business with hay fever and the related problem of asthma that it is having trouble keeping drugs in stock for treating these problems, Nash said.

Hay fever is primarily a seasonal problem which affects people all over the world, said Darrell Bennett, Health Center pharmacist. The term "hay fever" is actually misleading since hay does not have to be involved, and there is never any fever as a direct symptom.

No testimony

SACRAMENTO (AP)—Top officials of seven major oil companies refuse to testify before the new Assembly Committee on Fuel Hearings, the chairman says.

But a lobbyist for the oil companies, William J. Keese, said six of the seven companies offered to send "top notch" people to testify, the seventh never got the telegraphed invitation.

In any case the chairman, freshman Assemblyman Mel Levine, D-Rancho Monic, cancelled his hearing Monday.

What happens in hay fever, or pollinosis, is that pollen enters a person's air passages. If the person happens to be sensitive to the pollen, this invasion will cause certain body cells to release a chemical called histamine, which then directly causes the symptoms associated with hay fever.

Some people believe that the San Luis Obispo area is worse than others for having an abundance of the pollens which induce hay fever. There is a wider variety of plant pollens here than in many of the areas from which students come, Bennett said. Consequently, it is likely that individuals will encounter pollens here which have not been faced before and these new pollens may induce hay fever.

Although Nash said he does not believe San Luis Obispo to be much different from other places for hay fever, he said this year is probably worse for hay fever and asthma sufferers than in the past. This may be due to the abundant rain.

In any case, there has been plenty of business for the Health Center this spring. In an effort to meet the needs of a large number of people without having long waits, Bennett and other Health Center personnel have developed special treatment packets. Each packet contains different varieties of the type of drugs called antihistamines. The idea, said Bennett, is that after trying each antihistamine in sequence an individual will find the one best suited to his or her personal needs.

"The most common side-effect of antihistamines is sedation (sleepiness)," Bennett said. "We make an effort to find the one for each individual that gives maximum protection from hay fever symptoms with the least amount of sedation."

The first packet a student gets contains antihistamines which for most people are the least sedating and are also least effective, Bennett said. If none of those drugs proves effective for a patient who has followed the prescribed routine, there are other packets that may be given containing stronger antihistamines. These are usually more likely to induce sleepiness.

"As long as the student is going to stay in class, we give an antihistamine which will be (only) partially effective," said Bennett.

Such an antihistamine won't make a student too drowsy for classes, Bennett said.

If a patient is not satisfied with the results from the antihistamines, there are another type of drug—the decongestants—which may be used, said Bennett. Decongestants perform a different function and have different side-effects from antihistamines. While an antihistamine is meant to interrupt a biochemical process before it leads to a stuffy nose and other hay fever symptoms, a decongestant goes to relieve the symptoms after they have been manifested.

"A decongestant reduces swollen passages," said Bennett. "It helps (a hay fever victim) to breathe."

Some people who seek relief from hay fever choose to receive injections which lessen sensitivity to pollen and other allergens, said Bennett. The Health Center administers these injections to people who have a prescription from a doctor. The testing and initiation of the injections has to be done by an individual's personal doctor.

"Injections are used if a person has severe symptoms and medications don't work," Nash said. "They don't cure the person—only lower their sensitivity (to pollen)."

"And shots also tend to keep hay fever from going into asthma," he said.

Bennett said that asthma is similar to hay fever in the way it is caused, and a heavy case of hay fever (which affects the nose, throat and eyes) can induce asthma, which involves the lungs.
